The Foote Company.

The Lady of Lyons drew a packed house last night, and it was demonstrated that Carson has in store a feast of legitimate drama for the rest of the week.

Mr. Foote has a magnetic manner which makes an admirer of each one who sees him, and a voice which carries a charm to the hearts of all who hear it.

As Claude Melnotte, Mr. Foote portrayed the part in a manner both artistic and natural, and throughout the play his support did excellent work, especially Miss Plunkett, as Pauline.

After the fourth act Mr. Foote, was called before the curtain, where, in announcing the repertoire for the week, he incidentally threw in a little blarney to the ladies, and by the judicious use of his wonderful voice won the favor of every feminine heart in the house.

A successful engagement is assured the Company.

Tonight "Hugo, the Hunchback of Florence," will be presented.
